Part 1

Introduction

The duties and responsibilities of governing bodies are wide reaching and most would agree that there is insufficient time in a full meeting to give adequate consideration to everything. By dividing up the work between committees the governors can ensure a fairer division of the workload and ensure its duties are carried out effectively and efficiently.

There are no requirements for governing bodies to delegate any powers to committees and it is for each governing body to decide which committees to establish (if any), which governors are on them, their terms of reference and delegated powers, further information is contained in part 2.

For some decisions there is a statutory right of appeal, therefore for these decisions, especially personnel decisions affecting individual staff members it is important that the original decision is made by a committee so that there will be available sufficient governors unaware of the issues that may be used for hearing an appeal, none of the members of the first committee may sit on the appeal committee. Full details regarding exclusions etc. should be contained in the terms of reference.

Committee or Working Groups?

Delegation means handing over the power to make decisions on behalf of the governing body to a committee, which means that those matters do not have to go to full governors for approval, however the governing body is still ultimately responsible. There may be occasions when the governing body wishes to consider particular issues and have a report given to the whole governing body. In these circumstances it would be usual to set up a working group either as a one-off or a permanent arrangement rather than a committee. The group will have no powers to act on behalf of the governing body but can make recommendations for consideration.

Whichever powers have been delegated to committees it remains possible for the governing body to make a decision itself if it so decides (regulation 16(2))

Establishing Committees

Governing bodies should bear in mind the following when considering the establishment of committees and working groups

- Committees can only be set up and removed by the full governing body – usually at the first meeting of the year, the decision should clearly set out the following;
 - a) The name of the committee or working group
 - b) Names of the members of the committee or working group including any associate members and/or observers (regulation 20 (1))
 - c) Delegated powers and terms of reference
 - d) Date and time of the first meeting and frequency of future meetings
 - e) Arrangements for clerking and appointment of Chair
- Committees must consist of at least 3 governors (regulation 20(2))
- The governing body can appoint associate members (regulation 22) and can also agree to others attending without voting rights (regulation 23(1)(d)) – members of school staff are often included this way. There are decisions that associate members may not vote on which are:
 - a) Decisions affecting individual members of staff
 - b) Admissions
 - c) Pupil discipline
 - d) School budget
 - e) Associate members under 18 e.g. pupils do not have a vote

*It should also be noted that a decision taken by a committee is not valid unless the majority of those present are members of the governing body (regulation 24(4))

- The governing body should retain an overview of all activities – committees should send all minutes to the next full meeting for information
- The governing body should be clear what powers have been delegated and to which committee
- The governing body remains responsible for all decisions made on its behalf by committees
- All governors should be encouraged to serve on at least one committee to ensure a fair distribution of its workload

Chairing and Clerking Committees

The Chair of a committee can be determined by the governing body or delegated to the committee. Whichever method is agreed the vote must take place annually.

A Clerk must be appointed to each committee (regulation 21). The headteacher may not be a clerk even in an emergency. The governing body has the power to remove a clerk. A governor may be appointed as a clerk to a committee but the DfE recommends that governing bodies appoint and pay a clerk to provide a professional service.
